Vignoble Mingot

History

Following his grandfather Raymond and his father Michel, Julien is now leading the family winery. Julien stands for the new generation of the family business and brings a cross view from the winemaking, highly focused on quality, to the sales with a customer service approach. Now Julien is running Chateau Marechaux and had acquired Chateau La Pensée with his first vintage in 2013.

Terroir

The vineyard is located in the Savignac de l'Isle commune, close to Libourne, on what is historically called "the Bordeaux right bank". Situated at the highest point of the Isle valley, the plots benefit from a perfect sun exposure and an exceptional drainage thanks to the natural slope. 20 hectares of vines stretches out around the Château and permits to produce high quality red, white and rosé wines.

Château Fourcas Dupré

History

Château Fourcas Dupré is an “historical estate” from Bordeaux. Prior to its creation in 1843, the estate was known as “Cru Roulet” and its vineyards were authenticated since the 17th century. The vineyard of Fourcas Dupré is recognized as the best terroir of Lustrac-Médoc. Zenith de Fourcas Dupré, located at the apex of the Médoc region, is at the solar Zenith thus closest to the sun. This particularity has given its name to the wine.

With an altitude of 42 meters, Lustrac is located on the highest point of Médoc. Hautes Terres de Fourcas Dupré or “High Ground” is here to remind the vineyard particularity. Lustrac-Médoc is one of the 6 communal appellations of the Médoc area, together with Margaux, Pauillac, Saint Estèphe, Moulis and Saint Julien. Hautes Terres de Fourcas Dupré is a modern version of Château Fourcas Dupré, produced with the same quality standards than its prestigious brother. It benefits from the same know-how and technical equipments.

Chateau Fourcas Dupré – Lustrac

The main estate wine has a complex mineral style with touches of ruby. Its personality develops with balance and smoothness. With time the sweetness and elegance of its tannins gives a remarkable balance and harmony. One finds traces of roasted coffee beans and toast that develop with time.

Château Laujac

History

The estate has been inhabited since Antiquity. By digging the foundations of the vat-house, some diggers discovered fragments of mosaic, polished axes, flints and potteries. Later on, under the reign of Louis XIV, the d'Aujeard family owned the land of Laujac. Thanks to Colbert, Minister of Louis XIV, their social status moved up from wine trader to nobility. They owned Laujac until the XIX C., when M de Villemot bought it, and had the castle built up. It is the same castle which is represented on the label.

Laujac is a beautiful example of neo-classic architecture inspired by the palladian villas. A few years later, in 1824, M de Villemot sold Laujac to the Cabarrus family. The Cabarrus were traders and shipowners in Bordeaux. They sold Laujac to the Cruse family in 1852. Until that time Laujac remained in the same family.

Domaine de La Begude

History

Vast territory of 500 hectares with 17 hectares of vines, like a balcony over the sea, at the top of the appellation Bandol, brushed by the wind named Mistral. La Begude produces red, rosé and white wines belonging to the Bandol AOC, one of the first appellations in France.

The vines are situated 400 meters above sea level. From this elevation, the view extends to Ciotat bay and the sea beyond. The sea air continuously softens the climate of this terroir, which is often extreme. The soil's poverty and the wind allow us to have wines with no excess of alcohol, nor heaviness.

The particularity of la Bégude is its extraordinary diversity of soils and expositions. This mosaic of vines remind us of a color pallet for an artist. It's surrounded by olive trees and the Mediterranean forest caring heavy scents of garrigue. They serve as a setting, if not a jewel case.
